Training in Protection of the Chief of State

1. Within the past three years, the undersigned has participated in or planned for three different training courses in Protection of the Chief of State, presented by KUHAKK for emerging or developing countries. It appears probable that the requirement for this type of training will continue.

2. Training material for these courses is not lacking. Mr. [REDACTED] latest revision of his manual is helpful, and since the assassination of the late President Kennedy a respectable film literature has become available.

3. To the writer's knowledge, there is no instructor currently on duty with the Office of Training who has had first hand knowledge of this subject matter through practical application other than the trial-and-error experience gained by the writer and Mr. [REDACTED]

4. It is suggested that arrangements be made to permit one or two OTR instructors to spend a period of time, perhaps from one to three weeks, with the White House detail of the U.S. Secret Service to observe this unit in operation and, perhaps, to participate in some of their activities. Such an exercise would effectively remove OTR instruction from the theoretical approach in this vital subject and would greatly enhance our training.
